

Carpentier Has Lost Prestige Since His Arrival in America for Battle With Dempsey

FRENCHMAN IS FRAIL AS COMPARED TO FOE

BY SPARROW MCGANN.

NEW YORK, May 21.—Since Georges Carpentier's arrival in this country a decided slump has been noted in the confidence of those boxing enthusiasts who had been inclined to the belief that the Frenchman had an even-money chance to beat Jack Dempsey on July 2 next. You hear no talk of that sort today. Georges has lost his prestige. The reasons for this state of mind follow:

No. 1.—As compared to the rugged Dempsey, with his blacksmith chest, shoulders and other rugged physical characteristics, Carpentier when he reached here suggested a jockey. The Frenchman has a sort of a sinking-in effect about the cheek bones which, though probably natural, suggests a man who is too finely trained. Again, his chin is somewhat sharp, and the impression he gave was that he was a pretty fragile customer to battle for the heavyweight championship of the world.

No. 2.—The theory of his manager, Desamps, is that too much boxing will not help his protegee and that, as a consequence, sparring as a part of the training course will be limited, emphasis being placed on road work, gymnastics, shadow boxing and the like. How this wise guy, can Carpentier expect to perfect himself in judgement of distance, timing, and all the other things of which a boxer is constantly attentive on lest a fighter grow rusty in these valuable elements of his game?

No. 3.—The secretiveness at Carpentier's training quarters may have been designed to conceal from the public how good the French fighter is. But there are a lot of Americans who are doing it out that it might be for fear of showing how poor he is. Looking over Carpentier's opponents, there is a growing tendency to talk down the caliber of the men he has met. Of those who the best are held to be Billy Papke, Frank Klaus and Joe Jeannette, all of whom he has beaten, the Frenchman may have been said about other men Carpentier has fought, however, no one can say that these three are not good fighters. They are good, but about in their prime, and Carpentier, though a mere kid, gave them grueling battles. Why this is not held to his credit is puzzling.

As for Dempsey, as every one well knows, had not Bill Brennan's fight with him, he would now be at least a three-to-one favorite, with not a great deal of interest in his coming fight at that. Somehow, this little Brennan affair has been fading out of mind, while the good of the French fighter is, but Dempsey's man-killing performances against Willard, Fulton, Miske and other opponents.

French Fans Are Coming.
By the Associated Press.
PARIS, May 21.—Two hundred French fight fans have booked passage on the steamer Leopolda, which will take a representative of the French government to America to witness the championship match between Georges Carpentier, the French idol, and Jack Dempsey.
